Sales center opens for new rowhomes

Chicago-based Lexington Homes announces the opening of its sales center for Lexington Village at Rob Roy, a community of 15 new-construction rowhomes in northwest-suburban Prospect Heights.

Located at the northeast corner of Euclid Avenue and Route 83 at 215 S. Elmhurst Road in Prospect Heights, the sales center is right across from the Randhurst Village outdoor shopping complex and just half a mile west of Lexington Village at Rob Roy, which is located at 360 Country Club Drive.

The first rowhomes for Lexington Village at Rob Roy will be delivered in late spring. The three-story, 2½-bath homes include a two-car garage and family room on the first level; a living room, dining room and kitchen on the second floor; and two to three bedrooms, including a master bedroom suite, on the third floor. One of the three floor plan designs also includes a den. Based priced from $262,900, homes will measure 1,605 to 1,913 square feet.

"We are building very similar homes at Lexington Park in Des Plaines, so homebuyers can walk through three similar, fully decorated models at Lexington Park, located about 10 minutes from the sales center," says Jeff Benach, co-principal of Lexington Homes.

Kitchens feature granite counters, stainless steel appliances and wood floors.

Rob Roy feature the kind of high-end finishes that buyers expect in a home in this area, says Benach.

"We are including a lot of brick on the exterior, as well as large windows, shutters and wood trim, which are elements not normally found on the exteriors of rowhomes," Benach says. "On the interior, kitchens will feature granite countertops, GE stainless steel appliances and wood flooring. The foyers and bathrooms will have ceramic-tile flooring."
